WORLDWARIIII

On January 7th, the Town board purchased a siren in case of air raids.

Later the year, on October 7th, Minnetonka was officially subjected to the price controls of the national Office of Price Administration. The OPA had the power to place ceilings on all prices (except agricultural products) and to ration the scarce supplies of other items, including tires, shoes, sugar, fuel oil, and processed foods. The hope was that these price ceilings would help keep the economy stable after the outbreak of the war.
